INTRODUCTION

The global recession, induced by COVID-19, will fundamentally change the way humanity works, and socializes, for years to come. The COVID-19 crisis will be a catalyst to unprecedented changes in every industry. Every industry will be forced to reform and restructure in order to transform into the new realities that will emerge.

This will, in turn, affect the job opportunities for both fresh graduates and forced unemployed due to COVID-19.

According to the All India Survey of Higher Education by the Ministry of Human Resource Development, India saw 32.9 lakh students graduate from the Arts, Commerce, Science and Humanities streams in 2019. Engineering and MBA graduates accounted for around 16 lakh graduates last year, and the numbers may be expected to be comparable for 2020. In an already bleak job market with growing unemployment rates, a majority of these graduates are likely to find it extremely difficult to find a suitable job.

THREE FACTORS

1. Agility: Agility will be the single biggest reason why some organizations will tide over this crisis. Agile organizations will use early insights, realign policies and processes, and train their organization workforce to focus on customer challenges.

Agility will be about making quick changes by the organization leadership, and communicating the same decisively to the organization, partner ecosystems, and customers.

It will be built on insightful planning that sets the playbook of a new execution template that did not exist earlier.

This would further bring efficiency and optimization to proactively seize the emerging opportunities, and create meaningful impact for society to prosper.

2. Digital: Digital transformation should be aimed at creating holistic capabilities to leverage the possibilities and opportunities that new digital age technology presents.

This will enable to serve the customers better and evolve the business. It will not be about technology adoption, but about evolution of business models, including products, processes and services.

It will be about exploring the canvass of opportunities presented by cloud, big data, analytics, AI, IOT, and other emerging realities that are shaping a new wave of customer behaviour.

The end goals of business continuity and profitability, stakeholder's value and customer satisfaction will drive this transformation.

3. Work from Home Culture: The "Work from Home" Culture will play a defining role, has the potential to "STOP" this crisis, and is an industry worth trillions of dollars.

In many cases, it's priceless. To elaborate:

(S) Social Distancing: At the heart of work from home is social distancing, laying the foundational, preventive, cure for every country to limit the exposure and spread of this deadly pandemic. This alone can save the spread of the virus and help keep a check on the health of every individual, organization and the world economy.

(T) Travel Time: On an average, every working person travels for about two hours from home to work, and back. Working from home can save every employee over 600 hours of travel time, in a year, translating to 25 days of travel saving money, energy and time.

(O) Occupancy: Every company, big or small can potentially save 50 percent and above of office occupancy rental/leased space cost by allowing a sizeable chunk of support functions, and back-end operations, to work from home.

(P) Pollution: Apart from being a leading source of Green House emissions, daily commuting through road and rail transportation is responsible for over 30 percent of particulate emissions, killing millions of people every year due to respiratory illnesses, and wasting billions of dollars in healthcare.

Impact of COVID19 on the future of jobs.

1. Full-time Jobs will reduce and Gig economy will see mainstream adoption

It is very clear that jobs that will not add value to any business will quickly perish.

Freelancers and contractual workforce to carry out more and more jobs they need.

Companies will look for reducing their fixed overheads and find ways to outsource everything except the absolute core jobs with a direct impact on the organization's IP.

2. Remote and digital working will become the new norm

Mass remote working for prolonged times will make people more mature in remote working.

It will also change the behavior of people and expectations from companies. Technology will improve significantly to provide not only remote working with great experience but also remote schooling.

Homes will start having a home office to qualify for jobs in the future. Everything digital will replace almost everything that needs physical to connect to remote connections.

Social distancing being enforced will make an impact on social behavior and more people will work remotely encouraging social distancing as an accepted norm for a longer period.

3. Salaries will become unfixed

The obvious reaction to a financial crisis is cutting costs. Companies will not be able to shoulder the burden of taking care of employees beyond their means.

With the rapid growth and rising costs, more and more companies have been living on very low margins or perpetual losses and in changing times, funding will be hugely challenged.

Companies will look at adding variable salaries to a clause that will take care of sudden cuts that may be needed for the companies to survive or sail through any such tough times.

4. Value perception will increase

Job titles will quickly meltdown and real value will be demanded at every level.

There will be clearly three values that companies will determine before creating a job; Accountability to increase revenue, Accountability to optimize costs; Accountability to provide value-added regulation and governance.

 The salary correction will happen across the spectrum.*

5. New jobs of different kinds will be created

Crisis situations take away millions of jobs, but new ones get created soon.

With COVID19, Healthcare and wellness sector will get a tremendous boost and create more jobs.

Digital economy will get a major boost and create more jobs for technology professionals.

A major change that will start happening is 'localization' with reduced travel and possibilities of reduced global trade, local economies will re-emerge and start creating small job opportunities that were destroyed by rapid and massive globalization.

6. Asian economies outside China will see an increase in manufacturing jobs

It is likely that countries will start looking at each other more suspiciously after the COVID19 breakout and start investing and building local manufacturing capabilities with lower cost and better efficiency.

Manufacturing will start moving to South Asian countries out of China and will create more related jobs in these geographies.

7. Fitment will overrule qualifications

With the changing needs of businesses on which they need to hire, increased focus will be to hire people with the right attitude who can learn any new skills faster than others. (Calling 'Ability to learn things quickly' among the prospective candidates)

Degrees and qualifications will not matter as much as they did earlier.

People will learn quickly to fit into new jobs and start in new jobs afresh instead of banking on their degrees & prior experience for too long.

8. Reskilling & e-learning adoption shall emerge even faster

The ability to learn any new skills quickly will be an added advantage for any job seekers as almost every business will need to pivot in some way or the other to adjust to the new emerging trends & global forces.

Even the employers will be more willing to invest in helping their current workforce learn new skills rather than investing more in creating & hiring for full-time jobs that carry the risk of getting redundant again with the emergence of new needs & technologies.

9. Fresh graduates will be expected to learn by themselves & come prepared

Fresh graduates expecting lengthy training and getting paid during the period will fade away faster than expected.

Fresh graduates will now make themselves ready for the job outside the system if they have to contest for a new job.

The fresh graduates can also expect additional competition from the lateral and experienced people who will now be looking for new jobs and even ready to accept lower salaries.

10. People will not leave hope and continue trying new ventures

Small ventures will continue to be attempted under changed scenario and create new jobs.

Finally, the will power of people will win over all the negativity and help the economy come on tracks faster than before.

A lot of new entrepreneurs & micro-entrepreneurs will rise, given this COVID19 crisis shall level the playing field in many ways, with every business & industry having to practically reboot fully or for a large part of their business from the ground up.

DST Research Project:

JRF under DST project called Sir Arthur Cotton Geospatial Chair

A study on Kolleru Lake aerial images for identifying and measuring the discrepancy on Kolleru Lake with Photogrammetry techniques using ERDAS IMAGINE and Multispectral satellite images supervised learning and unsupervised learning for land use and land cover identification.

Research Interests:

Unsupervised Learning on Multispectral Images

An enormous number of images are being collected for a variety of applications. To understand the features of these images, proper processing needs to be done. Analysis of image data yields information like attributes, objects, and features. Hence, it is complex to analyze these massive, indefinite and priorly unknown labeled data.

Due to a high number of spectral channels and a large information quantity, multispectral remote-sensing images are difficult to be classified with high accuracy and efficiency by conventional classification methods, particularly when training data are not available and when unsupervised clustering techniques should be considered for data analysis.

My research interest is to find feasible clustering algorithms and possible manipulation of parameters optimization with acceptable accuracy.

Courses completed in machine learning approaches for data analysis and image analysis.

Gained knowledge in concepts related to data mining and its sibling technologies like artificial intelligence, basic statistics and preliminary mathematics.

A proactive and fast learning individual seeking an opportunity to work as a dynamic data analyst utilizing analytical & methodical skills and relevant expertise to help the company achieve business goals while sticking to vision, mission and values.
